Three More Days, Six New Ways to Show Appreciation to your Housekeeping Staff

Chicago, IL, September 14, 2011 –International Housekeeping Week is September 11-17, 2011. This is an important week in the Janitorial industry because it recognizes the hard work that housekeepers do to keep building occupants safe and healthy. Here are a few things you can do this week for the keepers of the keys:

Show Appreciation!

- Give your housekeeping team a gift of flowers or potted plants with a personal note
- Host a “world of thanks” breakfast with food from around the world-enchiladas, fruit and croissants, cappuccino, and lox and bagels
- If you don’t work directly with housekeeping staff, leave a generous tip and a thank you note for the person cleaning your hotel room.

Celebrate!

- Hold a Janitor-cart decorating contest with your team
- Hold a towel origami contest and give the winner a spa sampler gift
- Play broomball in the break room! Clear out the tables and chairs and have teams take turns using a broom to shoot a ball to a target on the wall. Whoever scores the most goals wins!

Every day, housekeepers, janitors, and food service professionals do critical work for millions of people. International Housekeeping Week is a good time to thank them. PortionPac's Janus® program is one way to show gratitude for the essential role that Janitors play in protecting the health and safety of all building occupants.
